Prepare for a management role in today’s expanding healthcare industry with a Peirce Bachelor of Science degree in Healthcare Administration.

Peirce’s NEW Healthcare Administration program combines the theories and principles of healthcare administration with a practical, real-world approach for future leadership in the field.

A Degree that Positions You for Job Growth in Healthcare

Peirce’s Healthcare Administration degree offers students a comprehensive education in the business skills needed to advance as a leader in the healthcare industry — including human resources, financial management, communications and project management — as well as provides an understanding of current healthcare regulations, policies and procedures.

Peirce College offers Healthcare Administration students flexible class options to meet a variety of scheduling needs. Students can choose to attend classes online, on campus at Peirce’s Center City Philadelphia location or a combination of the two. Classes are taught by experienced faculty with a mix of academic and professional expertise to best prepare students for success in the healthcare industry or graduate degree programs in healthcare.

Upon completion of the program, graduates can access opportunities in the management of various types of healthcare agencies including: managed care organizations, clinics, hospitals, health insurance companies and nonprofits, as well as health marketing and consulting firms and law firms focused on healthcare issues. These employment opportunities are expected to increase across the Greater Philadelphia region, as well as nationally. In fact, the healthcare industry is expected to grow by 24%, or 4 million new jobs, by 2018 according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.
