TAKE A CRITICAL ROLE IN BUSINESS

Become an important part of an organization's success with a Peirce Bachelor of Science degree in Accounting.

With employment of accountants and auditors expected to grow 22% by 2018 — much faster than the average for all occupations according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics — Peirce's NEW Accounting program provides you with the education required to get into this growing field.

Education for Today's Jobs in Accounting and Business

As the role of accounting has taken on a greater significance, employers increasingly seek graduates with a specific accounting degree and expertise in accounting principles and practices, critical thinking and a core of sound math, communication, technical and leadership skills.

Peirce Accounting students undertake the coursework necessary for employment opportunities in the field, with specific emphasis on developing analytical skills, understanding of financial regulations, laws and ethics and core accounting values. The program also offers students the flexibility and convenience of classes online or on campus at the College's Center City Philadelphia location. Courses are taught by experienced faculty members.

Successful completion of Peirce's Accounting program prepares students for job opportunities in all areas of accounting, performing various supervisory, analytical and other challenging functions in both small and large companies. Graduates will also meet the accounting credit hour education requirements to sit for the CPA, CIA, CMA and CFE exams or to study at the graduate-degree level in accounting, business and finance.
