PENNSBURY – Giving back to Pennsbury, alumnus Arthur J. Lendo, Ph.D. has established a scholarship endowment named The Lendo Fellowship Program.

The man behind the program is a Pennsbury High School graduate (Class of 1964), who served as president of Peirce College in Philadelphia from 1991 to 2009. He said Pennsbury gave him “such a good start in life.”

The fellowships also honor the memory of his parents, Alexander and Florence Lendo, and the “courageous service” of his uncles who were combat veterans of World War II -- Lt. Arthur McEvoy, U.S. Army Infantry; Warrant Officer Henry Lendo, First Marine Division; and Lt. John Lendo, Navy fighter pilot killed in action.

“The cost of freedom is high and should never be taken for granted,” Dr. Lendo asserted.

He said the Pennsbury School District, through The Pennsbury Education Foundation, “has served as the vehicle to establish a perpetual, meaningful family legacy and support education in a manner of our choosing.”

Dr. Lendo credits Pennsbury for helping him to be successful in life.

“Whatever modest successes I may have enjoyed in life are a direct result of the love from my family, support from the community and excellent basic education from the Pennsbury School District,” he said.

For him, it was Pennsbury’s “good teachers” who provided a “high quality, broad educational foundation that greatly facilitated later professional achievements.”

Sports offered early leadership opportunities for him that laid the groundwork for future, successful executive positions.

His fondest memory as a Pennsbury student is having represented the school by playing varsity baseball and basketball. Continued...
