Throughout the year 2015, we celebrated the happy occasion of Peirce’s 150th anniversary. Thomas May Peirce had a dream in 1865 of creating a school which educated students for workplace success. Over the years, generations of men and women have made good on that promise.

You, our alumni, have worked hard, made sacrifices, and applied yourself for professional success and personal fulfillment.

This issue of Peirce Perspectives will review highlights from our milestone celebration, as well as give you an insider’s view of the future direction of the College from President Jim Mergiotti and other Peirce leaders. The new year at Peirce is commencing with a continuation of our signature commitment to our students and a promise to build on the tradition of excellence we have sustained for 150 years. We welcome your interest and participation in the journey!
President’s Letter

James J. Mergiotti

It really hit me during the week of events celebrating Peirce’s 150th anniversary. Serving a venerable institution like Peirce at this time in its evolution is such a unique gift. I was personally moved to think that, during the Fun Walk, we traveled the same routes taken daily by Thomas May Peirce and our predecessors who helped hundreds of thousands of Peirce students find success over the years; during the Legacy of Leaders Breakfast, Peirce was recognized for its role in the Philadelphia region’s ecosystem, working in concert with powerful and purposeful entrepreneurs and visionaries to create opportunities for many citizens and businesses; and at the anniversary party we celebrated the wonderful community that represents Peirce today and so effectively personifies our student, alumni, and employer centric mission.

The resounding vibe of the 150th anniversary has helped propel the next era for Peirce. Make no mistake about it, our future plans are bold and distinctive. Beginning this year, Peirce will be significantly differentiated from its competition with the launching of two new innovative learning platforms. The recently launched Peirce Fit provides students with the class by class option to attend in person or online. Peirce will be the only higher education institution in the region which provides that option throughout its entire curriculum.

The College’s new competency based platform, which will be available for our information technology program beginning in September, will streamline students’ paths to degree completion by recognizing and awarding credit for competencies mastered through their personal and professional experiences. Both of these platforms represent a continuation of the College’s cutting edge approaches to delivering higher education to its non-traditional student base. Delivery innovations can be traced to Peirce’s roots with our founder’s use of customized class schedules in the 1860s and can be cited more recently, in the 1990s, with accelerated class schedules and corporate site delivery, and in the 2000s when Peirce was first in this market with online delivery across the entire curriculum.

As I reflect today on the 150th anniversary celebration and the College’s rich history, it is clear that a major goal remains for Peirce College to achieve broader recognition for its significant impact on the region’s workforce and economic development and its innovative DNA. It is time for everyone affiliated with the College over the years to be more Peirce Proud than ever. We all must sing the praises of the past achievements of this remarkable institution and voice our enthusiasm for the exciting future that abounds.

Sincerely,

James J. Mergiotti

INSTITUTIONAL ADVANCEMENT SPOTLIGHT

Hello!

My name is Uva Coles, and I am Vice President, Institutional Advancement and Strategic Partnerships here at Peirce College. Admittedly, it’s a long title, but in essence, I raise funds, provide support of our students, alumni and friends, and develop partnerships in a relevant, and expedient way. But to continue to do this work, we need to stay true to the mission we continue to give what Thomas May Peirce committed to when he started this school in 1865: opportunity for everyone to attend both campus and online classes to fund student scholarships, to build Peirce Fit™!

In April, we announced a new, innovative class delivery format which allows students to choose on a week to week basis if they want to attend class on campus or online. Since Peirce College is the only college or university that plans to offer this kind of flexibility across its entire curriculum, we wanted to give it a unique Peirce name: Peirce Fit™

Peirce Fit offers students the flexibility to never miss a class and stay on track even when demands on their time change at a moment’s notice. Peirce Fit also allows students to choose their preferred learning style with the option to switch back and forth as needed; attend both campus and online classes each week if they need extra support; and allows classes to continue even when unexpected circumstances make commuting difficult.

Currently, all healthcare and graduate courses as well as select general education courses are offered with Peirce Fit. By fall 2016, all Peirce courses will be available in this format.

As the College officially launches Peirce Fit, we need your help spreading the word! If you have a friend, family member or co-worker who is thinking about returning to school, but are not sure if they can fit college into their life, then Peirce Fit could be the flexibility they need to turn their dream of earning a degree into a reality. Reaching out to the Peirce Admissions Office is the best first step for more information: visit the website at https://www.peirce.edu/peirce-fit, email us at info@peirce.edu, or call 215-670-9000.

Introducing Peirce Fit™!
Greetings Peirce Alumni!

My name is Malik Brown. I am the new Assistant Vice President of Employer Relations (Office of Institutional Advancement and Strategic Partnerships). I am thrilled to be a part of the Peirce family and to help bring resources, jobs, and growth opportunities to our students and alumni.

It is befitting that my first broad announcement is to our alumni community, as my very first day of employment with Peirce was the same day as the annual Spring Reception. I got a chance to see firsthand the talent and diversity of the Peirce network. What an amazing and memorable way to start building authentic and life-long relationships!

Since the Spring Reception, I’ve had the pleasure of working with Rosemary Connors, Uva Coles, and the Alumni Association Board. For those who have not had the opportunity to meet Rosemary and Uva, you are missing a real treat. They are your chief advocates and the true embodiment of Peirce’s core values!

Over the last six months, we have made great progress toward our strategic goals. I have shaken hands with key business leaders, exchanged ideas and thought leadership with elected officials, and delivered some key messages that are resonating with businesses to help close the talent shortage in the region for specialized skills—cyber security, risk management, healthcare IT—and to better align classroom learning with real world expectations. Moreover, because of our partnerships with community-based organizations, we are working to become “top of mind” for many corporate foundations who have workforce development/education funding priorities.

As we solve problems and business challenges for our employer partners, they will in turn invest heavily in our mission and vision. This translates into jobs in growth sectors, family sustaining wages, philanthropic giving, and a true brand lift for our institution. There is no better spokesperson of the Peirce brand and experience than you. Call or e-mail us directly to be a part of this exciting transformation and benefit from the work that is being done on your behalf.

Sincerely,
Malik Brown

EMPLOYER RELATIONS SPOTLIGHT

“Chat and Chew” with Comcast

In October, as part of our employer relations strategy, Comcast Corporation shared time with Peirce alumni and students over light refreshments and friendly conversation in a program co-sponsored by the Information Technology Student Association (ITSA). Our first corporate “Chat and Chew” enabled 37 participants to gain exposure to a total of six Comcast leaders who spent two hours speaking to our students and alumni, taking their questions, and building relationships.

Similar to speed networking, Comcast human resource and technology leaders rotated to a different table every ten minutes. In this format, every student and alumni got a chance to engage Comcast in a casual, personalized way. Comcast not only got a chance to observe the quality of our students but also the extraordinary leaders and staff who make up the fabric and character of our organization!

It is in this frame that we differentiate ourselves from other educational institutions and will inspire large employers like Comcast to partner with us.
